

Consultant – Public Policy and Finance, Health

About CEPA

CEPA is an economic and financial policy advisory business based in London. We advise governments and their agencies, regulators, non-governmental organisations and the private sector across three practice areas: Public Policy and Finance, Emerging Markets, and Regulatory Economics. Our core staff have extensive experience in economics, government, banking, corporate finance and consulting. Further information on the firm is available at www.cepa.co.uk.

Over the last three years CEPA has developed a successful business area providing analytical support, business modelling and financial and policy advice to UK health sector organisations, covering issues related to health sector reform and long-term financial sustainability. We also give advice to global health organisations and partnerships that provide investment and support for improving health outcomes in emerging markets.

The Role

We are looking to recruit a Consultant with health sector knowledge to work in our Public Policy and Finance practice area. The key responsibilities of the post will include:

- Developing financial and business models to inform strategic advice and policy recommendations.
- Undertaking research and analysis and report writing to support the delivery of projects.
- Searching for potential new business opportunities, and contributing to the preparation of proposals and other tender submissions.
- Working with project teams - comprising CEPA staff and external associates - to advise health sector clients primarily in the UK, but there may also be opportunities to work on health related projects in the context of both other European and less developed countries.
- Contributing to certain aspects of the day to day running and development of CEPA.

Experience Required

Candidates should have an undergraduate degree in economics, finance or related discipline and 2 -3 years of work experience, either working directly for a health sector organisation or for a consultancy firm in a health sector advisory role. Strong quantitative and analytical skills or an accounting background would be favourable and experience of using Excel and other Microsoft applications is essential. Successful candidates will need to demonstrate strong interpersonal skills and client-facing experience, as the role will involve regular engagement with a wide variety of public sector stakeholders and external consultants.

Other requirements

Candidates should have the legal right to work in the UK.

Remuneration

A competitive consultancy remuneration package will be available for the right candidate. CEPA places significant emphasis on performance-related pay through its bonus system.

Application process

CEPA recognises and actively promotes the benefits of a diverse workforce and is committed to treating all employees with dignity and respect regardless of race, gender, disability, age, sexual orientation, religion or belief. We therefore welcome applications from all sections of the community.

Prospective applicants should send a full CV and cover letter to: Amanda Sharp, Recruitment, CEPA, Queens House, 55-56 Lincoln's Inn Fields, London, WC2A 3LJ. Applications can also be submitted by email to: rositta.priestley@cepa.co.uk
